Established in 1984, Barton Malow Company’s LEAPS (LEArning Practicum for Students) program provides the best real-life construction experience that our industry has to offer. Students learn about different building types, delivery methods and technologies while gaining on-the-job experience. Through intensive training, daily job functions and corporate networking events, LEAPS participants are thoroughly prepared for entering the workforce upon completion of the program. Each summer, between 30 and 40 students deploy to Barton Malow offices and projects around the country to bring their classroom curriculum to life.

What does it take to get a LEAPS internship with Barton Malow?

- Enrollment in a program relevant to the construction industry. Our interns typically come from Construction Management, Civil Engineering, Architectural Engineering or related programs.
- Good Grades! We want students who are serious about their education and their career. For that reason, we look for a GPA of 3.0 or higher.
- Passion for pursuing a career in the construction industry.
- Initiative. We want to see involvement in student organizations and demonstrated leadership amongst your peers.
- Willingness to travel. We have project and office assignments available across the country so we’re looking for students who are willing to go where the opportunities are!
